> I am writing in loud opposition to the Conditional Use Application for Laura Benedict for a noise waiver for the Red Barn. Between the trash trucks idling over there early in the morning and the excessive traffic driving on our lawn rutting it up and the band concerts as well as, the worse for me, listening to the outside intercom calling names all year long, we are saying no, no, no to a noise waiver. As the Red Barn grows it is destroying our peace. We can't sit in our backyard and have quiet. I can't sit in my bedroom on a summer day with the windows open because all I hear is that intercom calling names.

Since I am writing to you about the noise from the Red Barn I would like the outside intercoms replaced with something that flashes the name instead of having to hear it. Isn't there a city ordinance about intercoms outside that the car dealerships had to conform to? Well The Red Barn should be conforming as well.
